- Steve Wolf (IMS) explained that final input was needed from the Partnership on the Draft Public Involvement Plan in order to move forward with the initial public outreach. He reported that 1-on-1 interviews were nearing completion and that a final summary would be forthcoming. The need to identify an interest and urgency with the public was discussed. In addition to completing more watershed analysis, the upcoming public release of new floodplain maps was also discussed as a catalyst for generating public interest. Steve Wolf explained that if a lot of interest in watershed issues did occur, concise and factual information would be necessary to bring the public up to speed on the Partnership and its efforts. To accomplish this, new fact sheets and website updates have been recommended by IMS. These draft fact sheets along with the latest public involvement plan will be sent out for final review via email. All suggested revisions need to be received by July 5, 2007.
